CHEM STUDENTS PUTTING THE "S" IN STEM

Mr. Russ Good's Chemistry class has been exploring Experimental Design, creating experiments with a research question, hypothesis, Independent, dependent and control variables and quantitative and qualitative observations. The Mentos Lab required the students to design the experiment where Mentos mints are dropped into a bottle of Diet Coke, causing a rapid release of gas. More mints equals more gas released and a higher stream of soda. They completed four trials with 1, 3, 5, and 7 mints, estimated the height of the spray, and completed a lab write-up.
