A "Superior" Former Jet Makes a Profit

Entrepreneurial skills run in the family. Brendan Martin got the bug from his dad who has a business selling props. Just three months ago, Brendan used his own started his t-shirt company, Superior. "I've always been into designing clothes, so I decided to start young." Brendan designs and sells his t-shirts to all groups of people, but he says that mostly it's kids his own age who buy the shirts. "Most of my profit goes back into the company so I can build the business." He's sold 30-40 shirts since December.

He also performs quality tests, experimenting with vinyl and screen prints and seeing how the shirts hold up after lots of washing and drying.

Brendan was a sixth grader with Mrs. Murrieta just two years ago. Now he's a Bogle Bulldog. Check out his designs at www.superiorclothingcompany.com or on Instagram @superiorclothingonline.
