

Get Your Child on Track

Here are a few suggestions your child can use at home to organize school materials and complete assignments on time. Read through the ideas with your child and display the list in a prominent place. Spend some time with your child establishing good study habits and the school year will be a great success.

1. Establish one central location at home for doing homework.
2. Place your backpack and materials at your "study station" when you arrive home from school.
3. Establish a specific study time each night, such as when you arrive home, after dinner, or early evening.
4. Review your assignment notebook at the beginning of your study time.
5. Mark an X in front of each assignment as you complete it.
6. Check through your completed assignments and your notebook with a parent.
7. Carefully repack your backpack with your completed assignments and your materials.
8. Place your backpack by the door through which you will leave for school in the morning.
